

data group and adjustment means for adjusting the phase of the sampling clocks on the basis of the calculated statistics so that the variance of the values of the low-level picture element data and the variance of the values of the high level picture element data are reduced.

SECRET